

333 EAST 41st STREET
Prospect Hill Apartments
Block 1334, Lot 13

Construction of this 36-family cooperative building occurred in 1925-26. Contrasting with the simple brick walls (laid in Flemish bond, with a diamond pattern at the top story) is a Tudor Revival doorway of limestone: its pointed-arched entrance is decorated with shields, an arcaded band, drip lintels, and pelicans. Toensfeldt-Boughton, Inc. were the designers and engineers. The original casement windows and fire escapes are still extant.

NYC, Department of Buildings, Manhattan, NB 334-25.